

DANIEL

"I found myself focused on that distance, between who we dreamed to be, and who we ended up being"

About

As a singer-songwriter based in Israel, Daniel's music is inspired mainly by American and British legends, while heavily influenced by Bruce Springsteen's storytelling songs, and Pink Floyd's sound and visual aspect, Daniel blurs the line between the Indie-Folk world and the electric guitars based rock music. accompanied by a great performing talent on both sides of the spectrum: from acoustic-intimate-"one on one" sets, to full electric rock band shows, Daniel's music is deep, clever and moving.

Press

die-Folk singer-songwriter from Tel-Aviv, Israel. His first single "Caroline" got straight into the main radio stations in the country, while receiving great reviews and a still growing interest. Caroline's music video received large attention for its uniqueness and beauty. With big attention to lyrics, Daniel might come out as more of a story teller than a singer where his writing leans on the distance between a man and his dreams, or as he once put it: "I always loved writing about people trying to minimize the distance from their dreams, and what happened to them when they succeed, IF they succeed.

With the release of his debut album "Half way there" in 2018, the first single "Caroline" was chosen for "Kan-88FM" song of the week, IDC's radio song of the week, hitting the 200 radio-plays mark while its video-clip airing in MTV-Israel.

Daniel started his career as a lead guitarist for "The Corridors" band, with whom he went on a several tours around Europe: Germany, Netherlands and England (including the legendary "Cavern Club" in the "Beatles" hometown - Liverpool), The band is currently under the Bongo-boy label from New-Jersey, USA and a tour is set to take place the following year.
